

Standards of Practice

1. I support the idea that all human beings have innate potentials and different learning styles that should be recognized, exercised, and honored.
2. I will treat my clients, regardless of age, gender, race, or religion with respect, honesty, and kindness.
3. I will strive to understand and accommodate the learning styles of my clients that may differ from my own.
4. I will include as part of every Threadbare To Thriving Program I provide, the materials necessary for the client to complete the process.
5. All discussions and personal client information provided in a program are confidential and won't be shared outside of the program context unless express consent is given by the client. I will maintain the confidences of my clients unless I have reason to believe someone is being harmed and am required by law to report to the proper authorities.
6. I will never promote, or allow an understanding, that the procedures and techniques used at Threadbare To Thriving are a cure for any physical or psychological condition, or constitute licensed counseling services or medical advice.
7. I will ensure that clients with additional mental health and/or trauma conditions are given contact information to gain support from a trained practitioner, such as a psychologist or counselor.
8. I will only provide my programs and methods with a person who is willing. No force is used whatsoever and the client is responsible for applying the methods to ensure success.
9. I will require these Standards of Practice to be maintained by my employees and representatives when they are representing the Threadbare To Thriving methods or programs on my behalf.
